DWELL WELL

Look here for a smart, modern approach to style inside the home.

[NEW STORE] Your house is a disaster; the sink is stacked with dishes, and laundry is blocking the hallway. Where, you ask, is that home you've always dreamed of, the one where everything from the floor lamps to the place settings works in unison with the clean and simple lines of your clutter-free space? Okay, maybe that clutter-free existence is out of reach, but the flatware doesn't have to be. At Enflux, shop owner John Rhee—whose renaissance career spans from art historian to professional chef—adheres to the modernist credo of form and function when selecting stock.

He and his wife, Justine, have peppered the shop with designs that double as functional art. Look for handmade Japanese cooking knives by Nenohi, fine bone china by Jasper Conran for Wedgwood, funky Phynyl placemats by Chilewich and bold Italian dog bowls by Alessi. Located in Point Grey's West 10th shopping district, this is a spot for those who are looking to bring more art and beauty into everyday life one purchase at a time.
